Plexr is a cordless hand operated micro-surgical device that transfers concentrated heat to the treated skin tissue. It uses the difference in voltage between the device and the patients skin, generating a small electrical arc, similar to lightening. Plexr ionises the existing gases in the gap atmosphere (that would be the space between the needle tip and the patient's skin) producing plasma. The small lightening sublimates the fluids contained in the superficial part of the skin, without unwanted heat transmission to the adjacent tissues. Additionally it acts on the superficial layer of the skin preserving the lower layers, which reduces drastically any potential permanent skin damage that could be caused by the misuse of conventional lasers.

“ I have been having treatments with Frances Furlong for the past 4 years. I love the results I get from various skin booster treatments and dermal fillers, but over the years I have found my upper eyelid area has let me down in terms of ageing and not looking as wide eyed as I would like! I did have a consultation for surgery as at the time Frances could not offer me a good solution. However as soon as she told me about Plexr I booked without hesitation as to be honest I view surgery as my final option. This is my result 8 week after, as you can see I look less tired and wide eyed!
